Tech Startups Earn Recognition

September 17, 2008

Each year the Connecticut Technology Council analyzes "hundreds and hundreds of promising startup companies," said Matthew Nemerson, president of the industry group.

Tuesday night, the quasi-public state agency was scheduled to honor 100 of the state's most promising early-stage technology companies at its second annual Innovation Pipeline 2008 Companies to Watch Awards event.

More than 400 people were expected to attend the event at the Dolce Norwalk Center for Innovation and Leadership in Norwalk, Nemerson said.

The agency recognized 16 companies with awards such as the Cantor Colburn Award for Most New Patents, the Connecticut Innovations Award for Most Venture Capital Raised in Information Technology, and the Life Sciences Company of the Year.

To view all 16 award categories and the winners, go to www.ct.org and click on "Winning Companies."
